George W. Mann, the owner of the house on Foss street which was partially destroyed by fire Saturday evening, says that the fire did not start from an overheated chimney, but around a stove-pipe, which was thrust through a register hole. He says that the woodwork about the chimney was not burned, thus proving his claim.

The following complimentary words about D. F. Davis, the North Main street druggist, from the Vermont Union-Journal, printed at Lyndonville: "D. F.
Davis of Barre was elected vice-president of the New England board of pharmacy, at the annual meeting in Boston last week. Davis is one of the best known druggists in New England, and any honors that come to him in this line he both deserves and knows well how to do the duties that may go with them."

Mrs. O. H. Dale is quite seriously ill at the home of her brother, L. A. Estabrook, in West Lebanon, N. H., and will be taken to-morrow to the hospital at Hanover for an operation for a tumor.
Mrs. Hale had been ill for several weeks, but it was thought that she was getting better last week, when she went to West Lebanon. Her condition was examined there, and it was found that a small tumor had developed quite suddenly and an operation would be necessary. Mr.
Hale went to West Lebanon to-day.

The seven-by-nine shack beside the water tank in the Central Vermont yard, which is used by the car-takers of the passenger cars to keep his supplies, caught fire at 8:30 o'clock this morning.
A small stove is kept in the building, and the stovepipe, which extends through the roof, became overheated and set fire to the boards in the roof. The blaze was discovered before it had gained much headway, and the employees in the freight office formed a bucket brigade from the water tank and soon had the fire out.
